

PRINCEON "PROM"
A TWO-DAY AFFAIR

500 Guests Expected From All Parts of Country for Big Ball and Many Dances.

The annual junior promenade, commonly known as "the prom," is to be held this weekend on March 4 and 5 at Princeton University, with the whole campus in a state of more or less jovial confusion, with the mid-year exams just completed. The Princeton "prom" is always a national affair, with society celebrities and debutantes from all over the country. About fifteen hundred guests are expected, including the Princeton girls and "grads."

The first and largest dance is to be held Friday night in the gymnasium, which has been decorated in honor of the occasion. A supper will be served from 12 to 2 as a stimulus for the dancing. Mrs. John Grier Hibben heads the list of hostesses and will receive the guests at the dance. On Saturday night the different clubs are holding dances and there is also another dance for you for those not yet chosen for the prom.

Members of the Junior Prom Committee are J. R. Forgan, Chairman; Everett Case, Donald Lurie, W. P. Stevenson, T. R. Drummond and L. C. Woods Jr., all members of the class of 1922.

"Built—Not Stuffed"

Do you know the reason for the fame of this mattress?

Until you sleep on an Ostermoor, you may never know what complete rest at night means.

Think of relaxing your muscles and nerves night after night on eight layers of billowy softness, all evenly compressed by hand into one layer of wonderful elasticity! The Ostermoor Mattress is guaranteed not to mat, pack, get hard or lumpy. Non-absorbent, dust-, moth-, and vermin-proof. And its elasticity is permanent. Such are the qualities that have made the Ostermoor famous for sixty-eight years. Isn't this the kind of mattress you would like to sleep on? It's just as easy to select an Ostermoor as to choose an inferior, uncomfortable one.

Why not, some day this week, come direct to our block-long showrooms and see for yourself why the Ostermoor is such a comfortable, sleep-inducing mattress? Here you can select a mattress from among the many styles and sizes that are always in stock, fresh from our workrooms.
